

How a National Hotel Network Made Corporate Travel More Seamless with TreviPay

The Sector

The travel and hospitality industries were hit hard by the pandemic. Hotels, particularly midscale and budget properties, have struggled to return to pre-pandemic occupancy levels. But forecasts show business travel spending worldwide will likely jump more than 38 percent in 2022. With companies spending more than \$111.7 billion on business travel every year, there's an opportunity for the hotel and hospitality industries to bring greater simplicity, accessibility, and financial management to corporate travel booking and payment experiences.

The Client

One of the largest lodging franchisors in the world aimed to increase its average occupancy rate (AOR) and build loyalty among corporate travelers by facilitating a direct billing program for a seamless payments and invoicing experience. Corporate clients gain the ability to pay on terms, receive consolidated invoicing and have a dedicated financial relationship with the brand. In addition, direct billing to the hotel makes commercial travel accessible for the business traveler who doesn't have access to company travel and expense cards or without personal credit cards to use for travel expenses.

The Challenge

Hotels across the globe have had one after another pandemic-related challenge thrown their way – from labor shortages to travel restrictions. In fact, according to Statista, there's been a year-over-year decrease hotel industry key performance indicators. At the end of 2021, U.S. hotels had an occupancy of about 44%, showing a year-over-year decrease of 8.7 percent. Similarly, revenue per available room (RevPAR) dropped 8.3% at $57.46 U.S. dollars.

On top of the new challenges that arose from the pandemic, many hotels are still spending unnecessary time on operations that can and should be automated. For example, manual invoicing is error prone and time consuming and many hotels still don't have the capability to easily issue an electronic bill to guests without manual intervention. This becomes even more complex for accounts receivable teams when there are many corporate guests visiting a hotel. By making the invoicing and payments processes more efficient for their A/R teams, hotels can focus on maximizing their bottom line and serving their guests.

There's an opportunity for hotels to leverage payments technology to build customer loyalty, solve operations pain points, and increase their occupancy and revenue while simultaneously ameliorating their own invoicing and accounts receivable processes.

There is an opportunity to relieve companies and corporate travelers of these pain points while also making the billing and payments processes more efficient for their own accounts receivable teams.
